Stály rozhodcovský súd has been established as a private and independent institution; its arbitrators are not representatives of state authority.

Jurisdiction

The Stály rozhodcovský súd settles solely disputes concerning proprietary matters of domestic and international character arising from civil and commercial relations.

The competence of the Stály rozhodcovský súd is limited to resolve proprietary matters that are capable to be finally resolved by a court settlement before ordinary courts.

The Stály rozhodcovský súd may not resolve disputes concerning a) origination, change, or termination of ownership or other proprietary rights to real estate, b) personal status, c) issues related to enforcement of judgements, d) issues that arise during bankruptcy and restructuring proceedings, e) between suppliers and consumers arising from a consumer contract or related to a consumer contract.

Principle of Voluntariness in Arbitration

Stály rozhodcovský súd is competent to resolve dispute between parties only if the parties agree thereon in the arbitration agreement.

Arbitration Agreement

Arbitration agreement is an agreement between the contracting parties that certain or all disputes arising or that shall arise between the parties in relation to certain contractual or other relation shall be settled in arbitration.

Arbitration agreement shall be in writing, otherwise is invalid. Non-compliance with a written form of arbitration agreement may be substituted by a declaration of the parties recorded in minutes prepared by an arbitrator until commencement of arbitration at the latest, whereby the parties submit their dispute to the jurisdiction of the Stály rozhodcovský súd.

Arbitration agreement may have the form of a separate agreement or an arbitration clause included in contract. The parties may agree that the arbitration agreement refers to settlement of their future disputes that may arise in their mutual civil and commercial relations; however, the parties may also agree upon arbitration agreement referring to existing dispute. The arbitration agreement may be concluded also in respect to the dispute pending before the ordinary court.

Speed of the Proceedings

The dispute brought before the Stály rozhodcovský súd may be finally settled within several months depending on complicity and severity of the dispute in question. This is an enormous acceleration of the proceedings compared to proceedings brought before ordinary courts in which it takes several years to reach a final judgment.

The following factors contribute to speed of arbitration proceedings:

- principally written form of arbitration in conjunction with use of electronic communication (facsimile, e-mail)
- fact that arbitrators have a capacity to devote sufficient attention to dispute in arbitration contrary to the Slovak ordinary courts that are heavily overloaded
- adversary system of arbitration (e.g. only evidence offered by the parties shall be presented in the arbitration)
- even if the defendant is inactive during the arbitration the Stály rozhodcovský súd is free to proceed in order to determine facts of the case and to fairly settle the dispute without undue delay

By the speed of arbitration effective protection of rights of the parties to arbitration is ensured. The Stály rozhodcovský súd is at the same time able to ensure effective and rapid protection of rights of the parties to arbitration even in case of enforcement of a higher number of claims with a smaller nominal value.

Lower Costs of Arbitration

Costs incurred to the parties in arbitration are lower in comparison with the proceedings before ordinary courts because:

- arbitration fee is in the majority of cases lower than the court fee
- parties may save attorney's fees because it is not mandatory to be represented by an attorney in arbitration
- in case of written form of arbitration parties will save costs that would be incurred in connection with oral hearings that occur in court proceedings (e.g. travel costs, etc.)
- with regard to speed of arbitration the parties will eliminate costs connected to a high number of actions that are mandatory in the court proceedings.

The party being successful in the arbitration is entitled to a compensation of costs of arbitration against the losing party
